Republican lawmakers were quick to say that they are responsible for the tax cuts and the $4 billion surplus.

Gov. Tony Evers covered a lot of ground during his fourth State of the State, ranging from such topics as farm aid to the interest to tourism.

But Republican lawmakers say the governor ignored two of Wisconsin's most pressing issues: crime and election reform.

"While crime is skyrocketing across the state, [Gov. Evers] has no plans to make us feel safer in our homes," Sen. Van Waegand, R-Racine, said after Tuesday night's speech. "He lamented his inability to accomplish 'justice reform,' another way of lamenting that Wisconsin isn't more like Illinois, California and New York. The solution isn't weaker criminal penalties, defunding the police, prosecuting fewer crimes, or eliminating cash bail."
